How the FCU sits inside the grip module

- The FCU is the firearm, everything else are just accessories

Sig Sauer FCU

Sig Sauer P320 serial number

SIG P320 X5 LEGION 9mm Full Size | "Handgun of the Year" \(sigsauer.com\)

“Grip Mod”

- Not the firearm, so no serial number

JSD Supply 80% FCU – model MUP-1

- Technically the firearm once anything has been done to it, even drilling one additional hole

Casework

- No serial number indicates this is not a Sig Sauer brand pistol

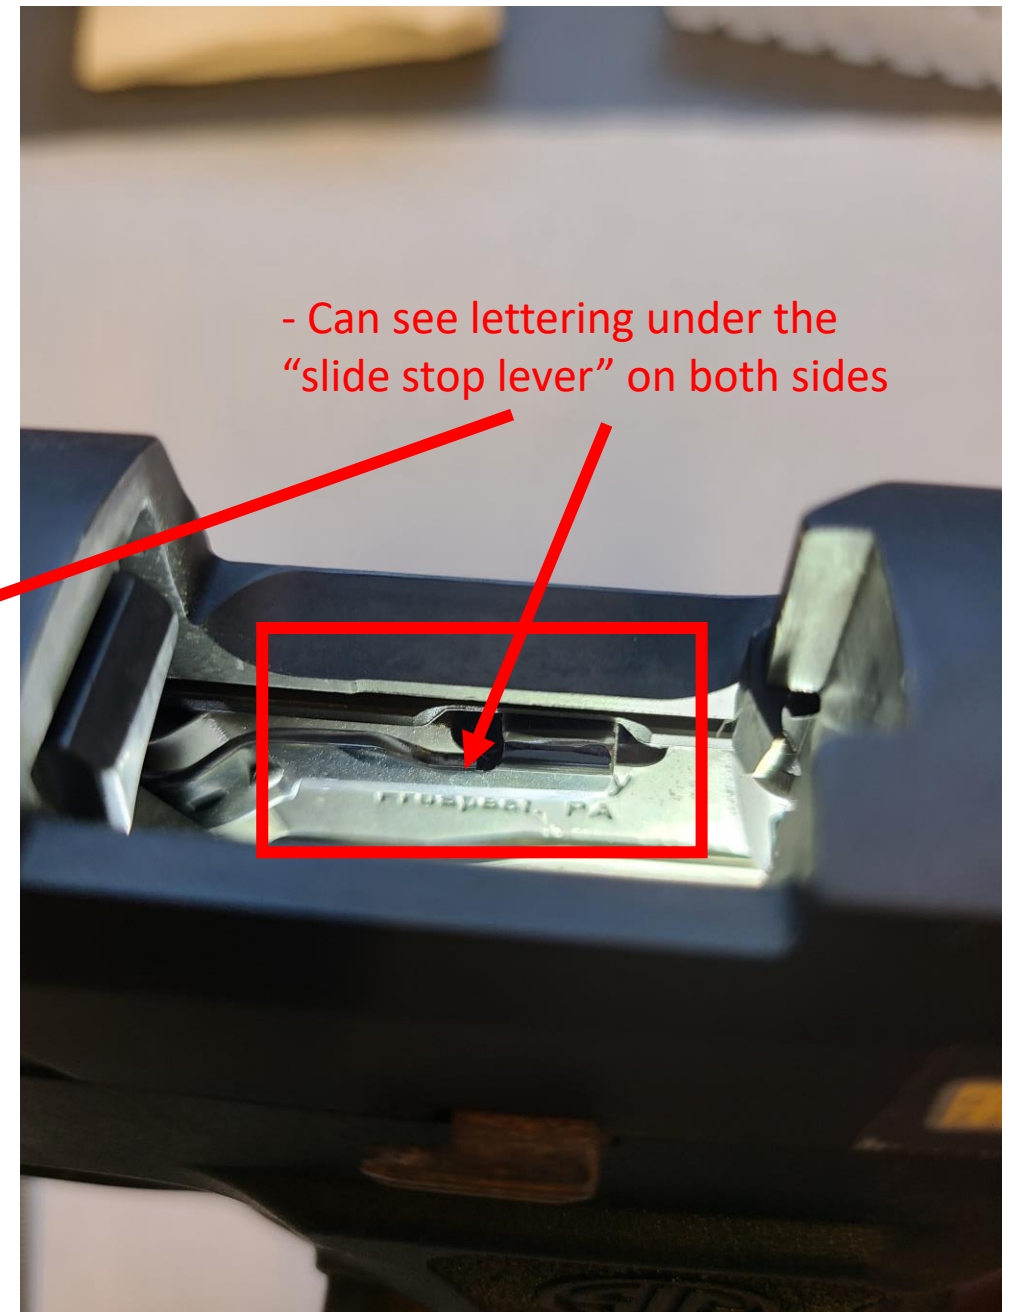

Casework

- While the slide is a “Sig Sauer P320,” the firearm is technically a different make and model
- Since the barrel is “40 S&W,” this should accurately reflect the caliber of the pistol

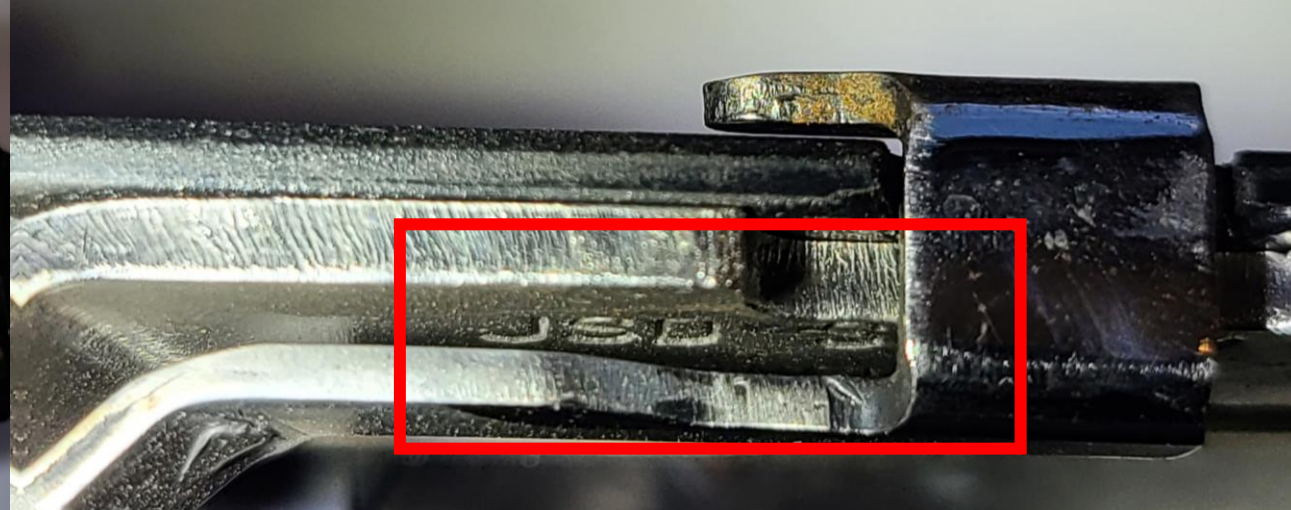

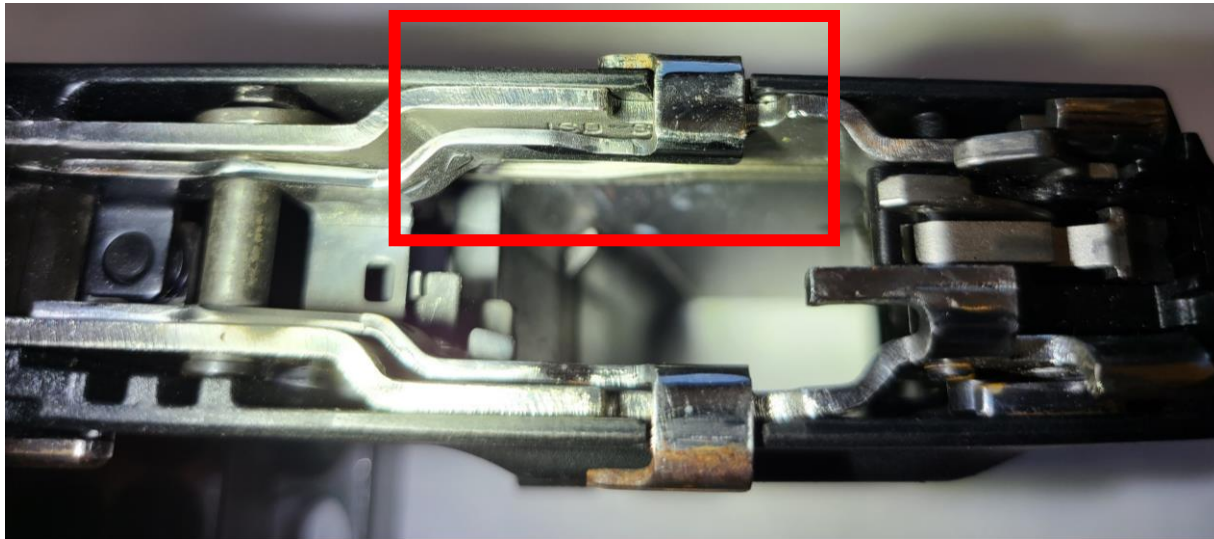

Casework – So what is it?

- With the slide locked open, and using a light, you can see what the FCU (aka the “firearm”) is

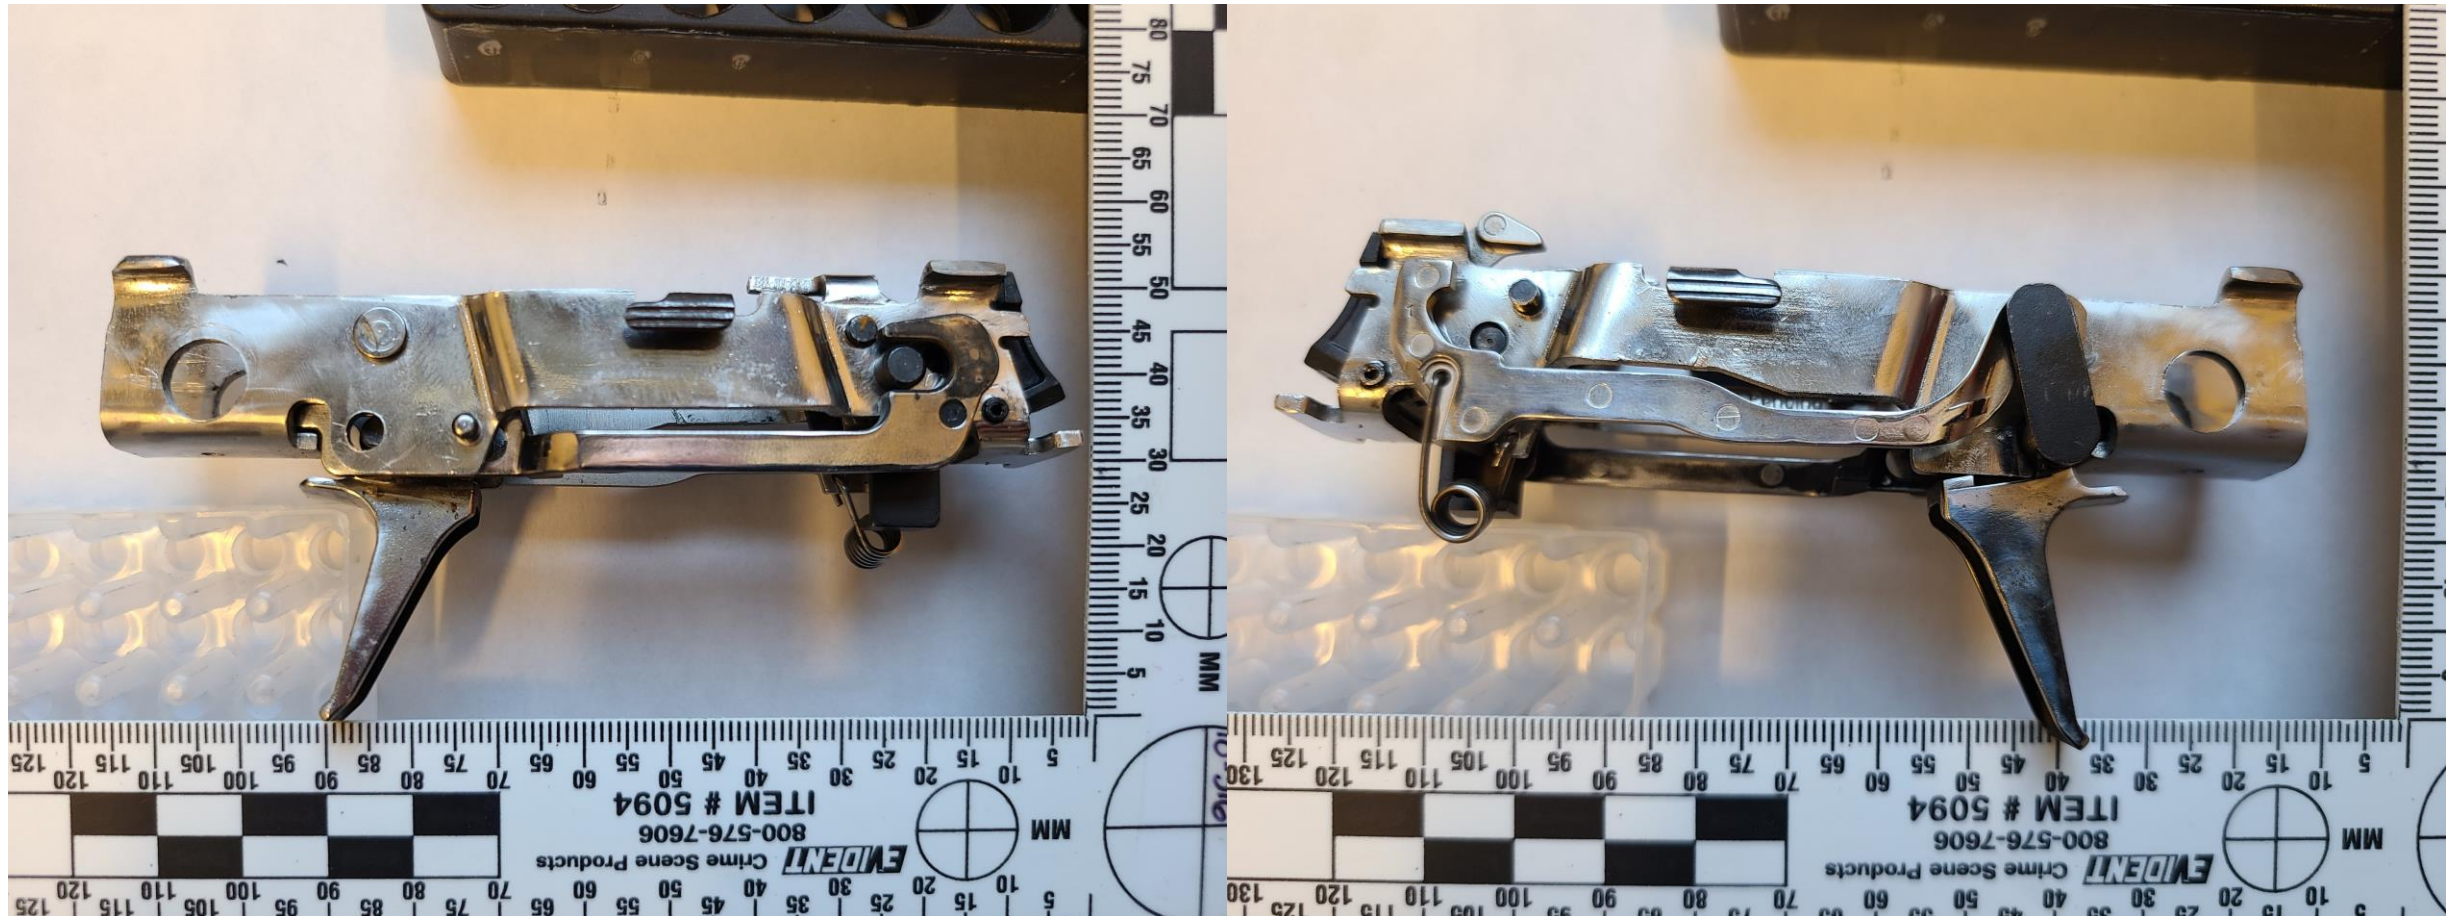

Casework – So what is it?

- Slide removed to photograph, but not as difficult to see with the naked eye
- Here one can see the “JSD” and the “S” of supply (so the manufacturer is JSD Supply)
- The opposite side under the lever reads “MUP-1”

The JSD Supply FCU

- This is the FCU removed from the Sig Sauer grip module
- This is the controlled part that is normally serialized, and technically the “firearm”

JSD Supply (manufacturer) MUP-1 (model) FCU
